How to steep our whole leaf teas

1. Begin with fresh, bottled or filtered water. Bring the water just to a boil. Place one teaspoon of tea leaves per 8-10oz cup of water into a teapot or infuser or place one tea bag directly into a 14 oz. mug cup. Pour water directly over the tea leaves or tea bag. Allow the tea to steep for 3-5 minutes. Remove tea from heat and serve over ice. Always keep prepared iced tea refrigerated.

2. To steep herbs, place tea in an air-tight container, such as our retail tea, and place in a dark, cool dry place.

Filtered Water

We recommend bottled or filtered water as most impurities have been removed.

Our long standing relationship with these estates allow us to continually offer Simply the Best teas and infusions.

What is whole leaf tea?

All teas (black, green, and oolong) originate from one bush, thecamellia sinensis, which is distinguished by its dark green leaves. As harvesting techniques improve, whole leaves and young new shoots are plucked and processed for optimal freshness. Each new crop of tea delivers unique characteristics from the particular environmental and climatic condition of that region, including soil and water, as well as the care and technique of the tea grower.

Whole leaf tea allows the tea leaves to retain their natural properties resulting in the most flavorful cup of tea possible. During processing, when the leaves are unfurled, releasing their flavor into the water. By exclusively using whole leaves in both our whole leaf tea bags and tea bags, you are assured Simply the Best cup of tea.
